

What do my dues pay for?

Paying your chapter dues is a necessary part of membership in Delta Gamma. However, we understand that personal budgets are limited, and it can be tough to understand why dues are worth your hard-earned financial resources.

Benefits of your dues include tangible things like supplies for chapter programs, participation in events, housing, and the salaries of people like your house director. They also include the intangible benefits, like leadership development, sisterhood, sense of belonging and an increased likelihood to remain enrolled until graduation.

Your dues make the idea of
an action and a promise.

Each action, an intention

In short, your dues help turn the idea of women supporting women into something actionable. You are investing in yourself and your sisters to gain leadership development and to experience personal and professional growth opportunities. You are investing in your advisers to receive the tools to be great coaches and supporters. Paying dues puts Delta Gamma's purpose into action—empowering our members to be champions of the ideals and missions that support our sisterhood.

The work of lasting progress

Dues are about more than just your four-year collegiate experience. Paying your dues helps lay the groundwork for future members. The things we are passionate about today, including racial equity, mental health, and sexual violence prevention among many others, are advanced through the dues we pay. We know that our future sisters will benefit from the work we are doing now. That work begins with our commitment to give back and give forward through our dues.
